JEFFERSON FOOTBALL TEAM MEETS DEFEAT

Jefferson Union high school's football team put up a game fight against the San Mateo team last Friday, but finally went down to defeat by a 14-13 score.

Generally believed to be outclasses in the contest with the heavier San Mateo team, the Jefferson boys played a great game, and had the San Mateo rooters worried at many stages of the game.

The Jeffersonians scored a touchdown and convert in the first quarter, and a touchdown in the second. San Mateo earned points in both the first and third periods.

A number of Daly City and Colma residents were present to encourage our high school players, and the rooting section had a chance to display their loyalty to the team.

The two things that were particularly noticeable about this contest were that there were only three punts during the game—San Mateo kicked twice, and Jefferson once; and San Mateo was penalized only once.

BOARD POSTPONES ACTION ON PERMIT

At a meeting of the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday, when a motion to deny a permit for a spur track for development purposes in Visitacion Valley was lost for the want of a second, the matter was laid over for two weeks by the board.

Petitions, in which property owners of the vicinity of Walbridge and McDonald streets protested the granting of a permit for a spur track on Allen street, were filed. ARMISTICE DAY TO BE OBSERVED ON SUNDAY

Summoning his comrades of the World war "to remember" the Californians who gave their lives for their country, State Commander Frank N. Belgrano of the American Legion has sent an appeal to over 35,000 members of his organization to properly observe Armistice day, Sunday, November 11.

Commander Belgrano says: "Ten years have passed since we heard the glad news of the Armistice. Ten eventful years in which we have passed from the training camp, battlefield or windswept ocean where the fateful hour of 11 on November 11, 1918 found us, back to the normal affairs of life. Some of us have prospered, some failed; we have many experiences in the everyday grind of existence, but with each and everyone of us who served then, there remains that heritage of memories that nothing can take from us. It binds all of us who served together by a common tie. And now, ten years after, we gather in city and hamlet to 'remember.' Call it a celebration if you will, and strive to forget, but it will still be a day of memory—memory of friendships made, memory of varied experience in camp and on shipboard, memory of hardships, and most sacred of all, memory of those who gave their all—of those who died. And from the memories comes our inspiration to pass down to the coming generation the fruits of our experience. On this Armistice Day it is our duty to inspire in the children of our land the tenets of true patriotism and good citizenship.

Let us admonish them as to the horrors of war, but not lose sight of the fact that adequate defense is the best preventive of war.

The American Legion is the leader in the observance of Armistice day, and from reports I have received I know that the Department of California is going to do its part in making this a real holiday in the true sense of the word."

JUDGE'S DECISION FAVORS BAY BRIDGE

The last legal obstacle to the building of a bridge across the Golden Gate seems to have been brushed aside as the result of an opinion handed down last Saturday by Superior Judge C. J. Luttrell of Siskiyou.

Judge Luttrell denied virtually all the protests against the formation of the proposed bridge district. His formal findings and decision, embodying conclusions reached after hearing more than 2,300 protestants in the counties involved, will be drawn up later by Attorney George Harlan of San Rafael, counsel for the district, it was announced.

The next step will be the appointment of the eleven directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District. They will be named by the boards of supervisors of the six counties, San Francisco, Marin, Sonoma, Napa, Mendocino and Del Norte. Five directors will be appointed by San Francisco and six by the other five counties. They will proceed along the lines of the port authority of New York who build the bridges in and around New York, says the executive committee. It will be their duty to determine the cost of the structure and the manner of its financing and operation. The final decision as to whether the bridge shall be built will be submitted to the people in a vote on the bonds.

The executive committee states it will recommend to the directors that the bridge be a toll bridge and that the proceeds from the tolls be used for the retirement of the bonds.

The bridge, according to the committee, is a commercial enterprise that can be made to pay for itself by a users' tax. And the committee believes that no direct tax will ultimately have to be paid, with the exception, perhaps of that for the organization, but that the tolls will redeem the bonds.

MILLS FIELD REPORT SHOWS COMMERCIAL FLYING GROWTH

Proof of the consistent growth of commercial aviation is contained in the October report of business at San Francisco's municipal airport at Mills field. The board also gave final passage to an appropriation of $325,539 for construction of the second unit of Balboa high school, and voted $31,395 for street reconstruction work.

BODY OF SCHOOL BOY RECOVERED FROM BAY

Workers on the Coyote Point bridge on Tuesday found the body of Donald Johnson, aged 18, former member of the championship football team of the San Mateo Union high school, who was drowned in the bay while duck hunting. The body was discovered in Seal Slough, near Brewer's island.

The discovery ended a five days' search, but failed to clear up the mystery of the boy's death. Johnson was last seen struggling in the water after having fired three shots from his gun. His boat had apparently sunk beneath him.

AN INDEPENDENT MERCHANT WHO BEATS THE CHAIN STORE

There has been a great deal of discussion as to what is to become of the independent retailer. Any number of examples are given of how the chain stores and various co-operatives are steadily gobbling up the independent merchant.

When the owners of the Phillip Gross Hardware & Supply Company of Milwaukee read such comments they smile. They have every reason to smile, because they know that such prophecies can never come true. They know from experience that there always has been and most likely always will be a place for the aggressive independent merchant. They have a formula, that if followed as they have followed it, cannot but make the growth of the independent merchant sure and permanent.

Sixty years ago Phillip Gross founded his hardware business. Advertising was in its infancy. There were few "national" advertisers as the term is applied now, but Mr. Gross, even then, recognized the value of whatever advertising manufacturers did to create a demand for their goods. He saw that if manufacturers could afford to spend money to popularize their merchandise, the retailer could not afford to overlook the same opportunity. He was one of the first retail merchants in the country to recognize the value of national advertising and to utilize it in selling the merchandise he carried. That was an important ingredient of the formula that he used to build business; it is an important ingredient to-day.

The Easiest Way to Keep in Style

By MAE MARTIN

No woman would wear dresses, or blouses, or stockings of a color that's decidedly out of style or faded, if all of us knew how easy it is to make things fresh, crisp and stylish by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing.

Anybody can tint or dye successfully with true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. Tinting with them is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little longer. New, stylish colors appear like magic, right over the old, faded colors. Diamond Dyes never spot, streak or run. They are real dyes, like those used when the cloth was made. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's Free. Write for it now, to Mae Martin, Dept. D-143 Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Cow punching by airplane is the twentieth century method at Midland, Texas. Clarence Scharbauer has so much ranch land that he cannot ride range in one day astride a cow pony. Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner does than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Residents of the Orland district, Glenn County, last week dedicated a project upon which they have been working for nearly twenty years—the new $1,000,000 Stony Gorge Reservoir Dam of the Orland Irrigation District. The dam will provide an auxiliary water supply for 20,000 acres. The submerged area of the reservoir covers 1200 acres, forming a lake five miles long, half a mile wide, with a maximum depth at the dam of 110 feet.

Declaring that he will fight any attempt to increase the present state speed limit of 40 miles per hour, Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicles, last week announced that he will introduce legislation on the other hand to strengthen the present speed law. Taking issue with various clubs in California which are reported to be preparing to ask the 1929 Legislature to raise the legal speed rate or to abolish it altogether, Snook took his stand in favor of rigid enforcement.

The largest telescope in the world, planned to surpass by five or ten times the power of the great Hooker telescope on Mount Wilson, is to be erected on a California mountain top not yet designated. The California Institute of Technology has announced that funds have been made available for its construction and that work on the 200-inch reflector with which it will be equipped will begin within a few months. The telescope and a laboratory are a gift to the institute from the International Education Board, with headquarters at New York.

San Francisco will give its official support to a proposed National Horse Show to be held next year, provided sufficient outside contributions are available. This was the decision of the Public Welfare and Airport committee a few days ago, after hearing Dr. T. R. Creely, secretary of the San Francisco National Horse Show Association. A deficit of $4600 at the conclusion of the summer symphony season was reported. The request that the deficit be met by the city was put over for one week.

California will spend nearly $6,000,000 in the betterment of the Pacific Highway by the end of this current biennium, announces E. A. Crowley, general manager of the Pacific Highway Association, in quoting facts and figures from a report received from C. H. Purcell, state highway engineer. Work completed, under way or advertised, in carrying out plans for improving the Pacific Highway, aggregate $3,892,146.63, reports Purcell. Other work provided for in the present budget amounts to $1,979,473.75, he adds. The grand total, $5,871,620.38, will represent the reconstruction of 173.08 miles of this highway.

Distribution of the 1929 California automobile license plates will begin December 15, it was announced a few days ago by Frank G. Snook, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. On that day applications will be received over the counters at the main Sacramento office and at divisional branch offices in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Oakland, San Diego and Fresno. Mail applications will be received any time after December 1 and plates sent out promptly after December 15.

With the opening of bids for the construction of fifteen new mess halls and one storage building at the National Guard Camp at San Luis Obispo, immediate construction of California summer soldiers' camp is predicted. The letting of these contracts, low bidder on the general work being R. E. Burgund of Beverly Hills, with an offer of $35,940, and J. A. Freitas of Oakland for plumbing and the Cline Electrical Works of San Luis Obispo for wiring, will insure the housing of the regiments at the 1929 summer encampment. Adjutant General R. E. Mittelstaedt announced. Money for additional construction is expected to be available early in 1929, according to the National Guard head.

California is killing or inuring an average of seventy persons every day in automobile accidents. This assertion, based upon accident reports filed with the State Division of Motor Vehicles by traffic officers and police departments, was made recently by Louis La Place, supervisor of the bureau of public safety. The figures announced by La Place reveal a total of 19,833 motor vehicle accidents in which people were killed or injured during the first nine months of this year. The automobile accident toll for these months is graphically shown in the following table: Deaths, 1366; serious injuries, 5158, minor injuries, 13,309.

Announcing a $8,551,276.39 gasoline tax assessment for the quarter ending September 30, the State Board of Equalization predicted recently that total gasoline tax collections for 1928 will exceed $32,425,000. The statement showed that gasoline taxes levied for the first nine months of the year amount to $24,486,404.93. The levy for July, August and September was based upon distribution of 287,921,761.9 gallons of motor vehicle fuel, as compared with 273,753,469.6 gallons for the corresponding period in 1927. The announced gain is 5.17 per cent.

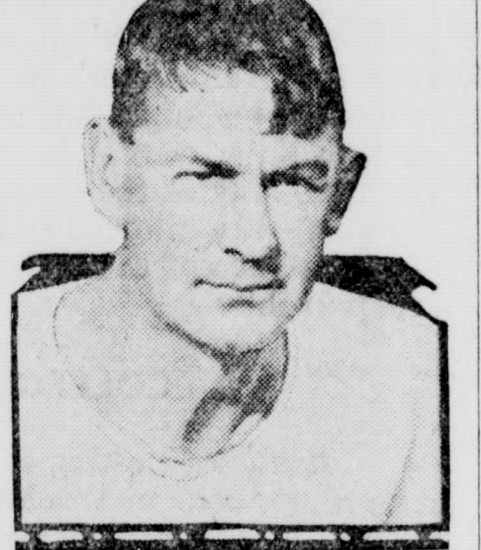

MUCH EXPECTED OF AL SHARPE

Look to Coach to Place His Team Among Leaders.

Dr. Al Sharpe, famous Eastern athletic authority who is now in his first year as head football coach at Washington university, is expected by alumni and fans of the Myrtle to gradually place the school among the athletic leaders of the Mid-West.

Sharpe has signed a five-year contract as director of athletics and is not required to coach football. A great love for the game, however, prompted the veteran mentor to resume actual coaching this season although his last actual field work was in 1919—his last as head football coach at Yale.

Sharpe was a great athlete at Yale. Although he was a star of the first magnitude in football he also made letters in basketball, track, baseball and gymnastics. After graduation in 1920 he immediately went to William Penn Charter academy—his prep school alma mater—where he coached until 1922. That year found him transferring to Cornell where he established a record as one of the outstanding grid coaches in the game. His 1925 team at Cornell was unbeaten and such eleven as Pennsylvania and Harvard were defeated.

In 1919 he became head coach at Yale but surrendered the football work after one year and devoted himself to athletic direction work until 1921. Since then he has been head of the Ithaca School of Physical Education at Ithaca, N. Y. In recent years he has officiated in leading Eastern college games.

Under Sharpe a new spirit has arisen at Washington and although material is none too plentiful this year a good team is gradually being molded.

'Gators "Ike and Mike" Main Cogs at Football

They have the same name, play the same position, weigh the same, but are different, yet they are apt to be two outstanding cogs in the 1928 football machine at the University of Florida.

Jus Clemmons, star varsity tackle last year, hails from Plant City and spells his name with one "m." Ben Clemmons, ace linebacker of the freshman last season, who resides in Tallahassee, spells his name with two "m's."

Jus is a brunette, and Ben is a blond. They say ladies prefer blonds, but in the opinion of Charles W. Bachman, Florida's new gridiron mentor, they both look "mighty good." Nineteen twenty-eight will be Jus Clemmons' last year with the varsity, but it will be Ben's initial season up. Ben was a center last year and is a fullback of much ability also, but Coach Bachman's idea is to have the boys with the same name, but who spell that name differently, playing his leading tackle roles.

Pitchers Not Supposed to Hit Safely Anyhow

Back in the olden days, the outfielders possessed strong throwing arms. The story is told of a particular game between New York and Washington in 1898. George Van Haltren was playing center field for the Giants and Pitcher Cy Swain of Washington was at bat. The latter hit what appeared to be a sure single to center. Van Haltren made a mad dash and gathered the ball in on the second bound. Without stopping, he threw to first and beat the slow-footed Swain by quite a margin.

As Swain walked back to the bench, he naturally felt that the whole world was against him. He stopped to take a drink of water and one of the players yelled, "Oh, well, pitchers aren't supposed to hit safely anyhow."

Pugilist Monte Munn May Run for Congress

Monte Munn, who played football in the Nebraska line several years ago and then turned pugilist, is now in the Cornhusker state, having returned from a journey including South America and Europe, to conduct the state Hoover campaign.

When he is not immersed in politics, he will be found on the sidelines of the gridiron at Lincoln; for there is no more loyal supporter of the Nebraska outfit than he.

When the election has been held and the football season is over and he has time and opportunity to plot out his future, it is believed the big college battler will decide to run for congress in a district where he is very popular.

When the Girls Wear Skirts That "Folded"

In the days when women's skirts were built like one-man motor cars a single skirt contained as much material as a circus tent and it was necessary to resort to a system of guy wires and pulleys to contract it when space was limited, as in a stage coach.

Crimolines could be puffed out or collapsed at will, for they were held out by three or four rows of steel frames slipped through little folds made for that purpose. When getting into the coach these frames could be released by little springs; the keys could be kept in a small space in a little box.

When they arrived at their destination the women slipped into the first room at the inn, again filled out their crinolines by locking up the springs and then appeared in the court of the inn before the eyes of other travelers, as smart and stiffer as the chalice of the flower.—Paul Polret in the Forum Magazine.

Spontaneous combustion of new hay caused a fire which destroyed a large barn near Tulare, Calif. Historic London Lane

Middle Temple lane, said to be the narrowest thoroughfare in London, is being widened at the junction with Brick court, by a reducing of the broad center footway of the latter. This has been done chiefly for the purpose of parking lawyers' cars, not for public convenience, for the temple is a private precinct of bench and bar. There is an ancient tree close by the new cutting, which happily has been spared. A smaller and younger one was removed a little while ago.

TEN YEARS AFTER

November 11 will mark the tenth anniversary of the signing of the armistice which ended the World war, after ten million lives had been sacrificed and close to 200 billion dollars had been lost by the opposing nations.

The armistice was preceded by the surrender of Bulgaria on September 29, of Turkey on October 31 and of Austria-Hungary on November 3, 1918, leaving Germany the only power opposed to the Allies.

Diplomatic correspondence leading to the armistice was begun on October 6, when the German government appealed to President Wilson for a conclusion of peace on terms previously outlined by him. On November 5 the Germans were notified that the Allies were willing to negotiate an armistice along these lines, but that the details would be dictated by Marshal Foch, commander of the Allied forces.

The terms of the armistice were delivered to the German representatives on November 8, with a formal demand that they be accepted or rejected within seventy-two hours. No discussion or modification of the terms laid down were permitted. The Germans accepted the conditions and signed the armistice at 5 a. m., November 11, the cessation of hostilities occurring at 11 a. m., this hour being, oddly enough, the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month.

Considering the deplorable conditions which existed in the world at the close of the war, the recovery of the nations involved, although by no means complete, has been remarkable during the intervening ten years.

Drinking of wood alcohol is being investigated by a federal grand jury in New York. Our guess is that its finding will be that the habit is bad for one's system.

Fourteen British journalists have been studying America during the past month. No doubt they got the idea that our chief interests are politics and football.

Radio was successfully used in locating a stray Rhode Island mule. The Democratic donkey has been using similar means to round up stray voters.

CHEAP FLYING SCHOOLS

According to no less an authority than Colonel Lindbergh, cheap flying schools are responsible for a large percentage of civil airplane deaths, of which no less than 153 occurred during the first six months of 1928 in the United States, while 276 persons were injured in the same series of accidents.

In some of these low-priced schools, it is said that students are "graduated" with only about ten hours experience as solo flyers. Of course, such men cannot obtain federal licenses as pilots, but in many states they are permitted to engage in carrying passengers so long as they do not cross state lines.

Colonel Lindbergh declares that excessive numbers of accidents may be expected as long as federal inspectors have no control over intra-state pilots, or until each state adopts standards as high as those of the federal government. This view is borne out by the fact that of the 153 deaths noted above, only six occurred in licensed and inspected planes flying over scheduled routes.

Many of the old planes used by pilots who travel over the country taking up people who make a flight merely for the "fun" of it, are veritable death-traps, often antiquated machines left over from the war or discarded as out of date.

So long as the cheap flying school and the rattletrap airplane are allowed to function, we may expect to see a continuance of the heavy toll of lives for which they are responsible.

COLLEGE HONOR CODE

Many interesting stories are told of the workings of the honor code at Washington and Lee University, where it was established by General Robert E. Lee when he became president of the school in 1867.

No supervision of students is exercised during examinations, yet cheating is virtually unknown. Nothing is locked up about the institution; books, articles of clothing and all sorts of property are left anywhere with the assurance that they will not be disturbed.

Several students help to pay their expenses by selling sandwiches, candy, apples and the like, but the sales are made without the presence of clerks. The articles for sale are displayed with price cards, and customers help themselves, placing the money in the cash box. During one football game more than $125 worth of lapel buttons were thus bought and paid for without the supervision of anyone, except that when the box was filled with bills a passing professor placed a weight on them to keep them from blowing away.

New students are thoroughly instructed in the requirements of the honor code and impressed with the importance of rigidly observing it, because, it is explained, this school is built around tradition. And the essence of that tradition is that "it's a pleasure to be a gentleman."

FORMER PRESIDENTS

It is interesting to note that no former president of the United States was born west of the Mississippi river, and that more than one-half of all the twenty-nine presidents were born in two states, Virginia and Ohio.

Of this year's candidates for president and vice-president, three were born west of the Mississippi, Hoover in Iowa, Curtis in Kansas and Robinson in Arkansas.

Virginia has long been known as "The Mother of Presidents," having given eight to the nation, Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, W. H. Harrison, Tyler, Taylor and Wilson. Ohio has been the birthplace of seven, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Benjamin Harrison, McKinley, Taft and Harding.

Only one wife of a president, Mrs. U. S. Grant, was born west of the Mississippi, she having been Julia Dent of Missouri. Seven president's wives were born in Ohio, five were born in Virginia; one, Mrs. John Quincy Adams, was born in England. James Buchanan was the only president who never married. Tyler, Fillmore, B. Harrison, Roosevelt and Wilson were married twice.

The lives of our presidents and their wives afford much interesting material for study. The average American might profit by becoming better acquainted with this phase of our national history.

LAST OF THE SIX HUNDRED

Although the famous charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava, immortalized by Tennyson, occurred seventy-four years ago, the last survivor of that "gallant six hundred" died only recently.

He was Edwin Hughes, a sergeant major, who until his death received assistance from a special fund raised for veterans of the heroic charge, which was an incident of the Crimean war, in which Turkey, with aid from England, France and Sardinia, defeated Russia.

The Light Brigade, composed of 673 British cavalrymen, charged the Russian field artillery over a distance of a mile and a half, losing 247 men and 497 horses in 20 minutes. They cut down many of the Russian gunners, but were forced to retreat in disorder. Their dashing exploit raised the morale of the allies, however, and diminished that of the Russians.

A few days later, at the battle of Inkerman on November 5, some 8,000 British held 50,000 Russians at bay in a hand to hand conflict until the French arrived and routed the enemy. Then, after a year's siege, during which the allies suffered untold hardships, the great fort of Sevastopol was evacuated by the Russians and the war was ended. It was during this siege that Florence Nightingale organized the first nursing system in military hospitals.

Thus, while the charge of the Light Brigade was unsuccessful, it was a moral victory which probably turned the tide of war against the forces of the Czar. It was a stirring memory that Edwin Hughes carried with him during his long life.

A New Orleans man rolled a peanut through Canal street with his nose to pay a world series bet. That would be an appropriate penalty for peanut politicians who make phoney predictions.

"DESERT SONG" RETURNS TO THE CURRAN THEATRE

After forty-five continuous weeks in California, "The Desert Song" will return to the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, Monday night, November 12, for a brief engagement.

Seldom in the annals of the theatrical business has a stage vehicle taken such a decided hold on the affections of the public as this, the greatest of all Romberg's operettas, which packed the Curran Theatre to the doors for eleven consecutive weeks not so long ago.

The forthcoming presentation will be that of the original company with Perry Askam and Elvira Tanzi, the original singing stars, at its head, and with the same organization of 100 golden voices.

The beauty of the Romberg score is the main reason for "The Desert Song's" popularity, although the book has a great appeal. It stirs the heart of anyone who still has a breath of romance in his veins. Possibly the pronoun "her" would be more efficacious than "his," because feminine theatre-goers have been pouring out for the production in large numbers. It is just the kind of story impressionable women love.

Cecil Stewart, who occupies a peculiar niche in the musical world, will conduct the augmented symphony orchestra during its return engagement.

For the benefit of out of town patrons mail orders will be accepted. The prices are, every night 75 cents to $2.50, with the exception of Saturday night. On Saturday night the prices are 75 cents to $3.00. The matinees on Wednesday and Saturday are 50 cents to $2.00.

"Good News," the collegiate musical comedy hit, ends its engagement at the Curran Saturday, November 10.

Memphis man knocked a girl down when she tried to kiss him. She was probably one of those whose best friends wouldn't tell her.

The choice of Senor Gil as the new president of Mexico will meet the full approval of the headline writers.

Let the peace talk continue; it's better than war talk, anyway.

SIDELIGHTS

Art Henry, an Atlanta negro, indulges in peculiar pranks when in a playful mood. His latest stunt was climbing aboard an untended locomotive in the railroad yards and driving it from the side-track into a string of box cars. He is under a charge of malicious mischief.

A man, as well as a woman, has a right to change his mind, thinks George Gibbs of Knoxville, Tenn. After jumping 102 feet from a bridge into the Tennessee river in a suicide attempt, he gave it up and swam ashore, saying: "I think I'd rather die naturally."

European countries which charge licence fees for radio sets are having trouble with "bootleg" equipment. This is, sets which are used clandestinely without payment of the fee, of which it is estimated that there are two million in France, Spain, Italy, Holland and Belgium.

Arrested for wrong parking, a chauffeur in Omaha kidded and laughed at the policeman and later insulted the judge, who gave him 90 days. The culprit laughed some more, finally saying: "I'm driving for the warden of the penitentiary; I'm in for life."

Commenting on the efficiency of Dutch housewives, a Hollander recently declared that one of them can run a spinning wheel with one foot, rock a cradle with the other, knit socks, read from a book on her knee and press a cheese on which she is sitting, all at one and the same time.

Judge Onion of San Antonio fined a newsboy $5 for disturbing the peace by crying "Extra." Mayor Chambers remitted the fine, saying, "Newsboys have to shout to earn a living." Now the newsies know but do not fear that particular Onion.

"Floaters" got 40 cents for every time they voted in the Chicago election last April according to testimony recently given in a conspiracy trial there. At that, some of them made a good day's wages by voting often. One said he got $10 for voting fifteen times and being sluggish by mistake by his own crowd.

Oscar Grab came to America from Vienna thirty years ago and got a job at $3 a week. He lived up to his name by accumulating a fortune of $1,000,000 making women's clothing, and on Christmas will turn the business over to his employees.

"Eventually the right woman will show up and women of the country will elect her president of the United States," says Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former governor of Wyoming. A race between Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Willebrandt would be interesting.

Prosecutor Repetto, of Atlantic City, charges that over 2,000 names were illegally registered as voters in that city. Among them, he says, are the names of cats, dogs, parrots, boats, children and people long dead. One alleged voter is John Talk, a parrot.

In violation of government rules, Miss Elinor Smith, 17 years old, flew her plane under all four bridges between New York City and Brooklyn one day recently, an exceptionally dangerous stunt.

After Florida Debro, negress of Helena, Arkansas, had buried a man supposed to be Robert Debro, her husband, Robert himself appeared on the scene. He was enraged when he found that the unidentified man had been buried in his best silk shirt and Sunday suit.

DR. CALDWELL'S
THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headache, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

Rejoinder Must Have

There is an interesting and characteristic story told of how Robert Burns had argument with a Moravian. His name was William Kirkland, farmer, in the parish of Galston. Burns and his brother, Gilbert, were going to the parish church of Tarbolton one Sunday, and got into conversation with this farmer, who was making for the Moravian church at Ayr. It was during the controversy about the Old and New Lights. The farmer defended the former, Burns the latter. The dispute grew warm, but Burns could make no headway, so tauntingly exclaimed: "Oh, I suppose I've met with the Apostle Paul this morning." "No," replied the old Moravian, "you have not met the Apostle Paul; but I think I have met one of those wild beasts which he says he fought with at Ephesus."—Weekly Scotsman.

Don't "dope" yourself when you catch cold; use Papa's Cold Compound. Men and women everywhere rely on this amazing little tablet.—Adv.

The Reason

The Worthington students in the first grade had been learning the difference between "love" and "like." The next day little Robert came to school and made the statement, "I just love milk."

Jimmie spoke up quickly. "You can't love milk, you mean you like it." "No, sir, I love it," replied Robert. "But you can't love milk," the wise one replied, "it doesn't have a neck."—Indianapolis News.

THE RETURN of
ANTHONY TRENT

By WYNDHAM MARTYN

"It's worth a half-million dollars today," Trent went on. "There are many bigger stones worth half that, but none has the blue-white flame of this. It is too famous a diamond to try to sell. You know that as well as I." His voice sank. "There's an old diamond-cutter who has done work for me at Zwanenburger street in Amsterdam. He would cut it in half for a price and forget all about it. If he did that no expert dare swear that he knew the stone. We ought to realize at least a hundred thousand apiece for each half. Think what that would mean to us. I could loaf about the world comfortably and you could go somewhere and find peace and freedom from the strain you are enduring now. What about it?"

She rose to her feet, her face colorless. "You have been so good to me," she said quietly, "that I have come to think of you as the best man I have ever known, the most gentle and chivalrous. Perhaps because I so much wished to believe it, I thought you had in reality put your old life behind you as sincerely as I have done. And, too, I thought you believed in me."

"I do," he said. She shook her head. "No. If you had you could never have offered me that." She pointed to the scintillant temptation. "You have shown me I did not know you and that you thought me a hypocrite." She realized that this was the most bitter moment of her life. Not until now had the consciousness of her love for Anthony Trent forced itself so strongly upon her. She had admired him at first for his skill and audacity, for the insolent coolness with which he had worked alone and laughed at authority. Then she had come to see the finer side of his complex character, the generosity which distinguished him and the absence of pettiness. These characteristics she saw now she had idealized until she had reared upon their structure an Anthony Trent who did not exist. The leopard had not changed its spots.

"You mean you won't use any of the money I can realize for you on this stone? Think well before you answer." "My mind was made up long ago. I need no time for consideration." "Well," he said, after a pause, "if so, what will you do?" "That I cannot say yet, definitely. Mrs. Kinney thinks she can get me work. I have some skill in fine sewing and the mending of old lace; it was taught me at my convent."

"How long will your eyes stand that strain?" he demanded. "The idea is ludicrous. You propose to pass the rest of your life as a working woman because of this silly prejudice. I can get you something better than sewing."

"Already I am too much in your debt to accept more."

Gone was the pleasant intimacy of a few minutes earlier. He could see almost a horror in her face. She regarded him as one who had seen the light for a little while and then, at adversity's first breath, gone back to the old and easier ways.

"Don't look at me like that," he said, "try to forget what I said."

She shook her head. "That would be impossible." She could not understand how in a moment such as this he could regard her with a whimsical smile. Had he no intuition to warn him that his defection had wounded her irremediably? That he should think her repentance only a matter of words showed her how ill she had judged him.

"If you have made up your mind," he said, "I suppose there is no more to be said."

"Nothing," she answered. "I can not repay you for all you have done for me. I am afraid I shall never be able to do that. I am leaving here today. Good-by, Mr. Trent."

"Not tonight," he said earnestly, "please do me one favor. I am leaving town tonight and shall be back till Friday. Wait till then."

"I prefer to go tonight."

"If you won't do it as a favor I must put it in another way. I'm afraid it will sound rather brutal. Mademoiselle Dupin, you are under certain obligations to me. Apparently they weigh rather heavily on your mind. You can repay me by remaining here until I return. At the outside it will be forty-eight hours. It is not much to ask, is it?"

"Very well," she answered, reluctantly. "I will wait forty-eight hours."

She did not understand how he could still smile at her. What a nature of contradictions was his!

"One question before I go. You have told me several times that the federal authorities were still seeking you. Why particularly should they want you?" He held up the Nizam's diamond. "Because of this?"

"Yes," she answered. "Particularly because of that."

"But why?" he asked.

"Because your government was greatly embarrassed by its loss. You do not know that before the United States went into the war a certain illustrious royal personage who is, oddly enough, very popular here, made a secret visit in a battleship in order to hasten this country's entrance into the war. He was here as a secret guest of the government. Absolute secrecy was preserved. Only once did he leave his fast cruiser and come by night to meet official Washington. Yet that night the Nizam's diamond which he carried as his bringer of fortune, his talisman, his good luck stone, was stolen. His own government thought it unwise to allow it to be known he was here and your own dare not advertise the loss. Now do you understand what a satisfaction it would be to catch the woman who took it?"

Evidently the memory of the affair was unpleasant.

"You will excuse me," she said, and ignored his outstretched hand. Her refusal to take it was not crudely done. Except that he divined her purpose he might have seen in the incident merely an oversight.

"Why don't you give me your hand?" he asked. "If any two people in this troubled world ought to be friends they are you and I."

"In the life I have chosen there will not be room for friendships like that. I shall work to forget."

"And I'm to be one of the forgot-

"I Shall Work to Forget."

ten. Somehow you give me the impression that I've disappointed you." "Disappointed?" she cried, her hands pressed against her heart, "if that were only the word."

Quickly she went from the room.

Trent looked after her and he was still smiling.

"She wouldn't shake hands," he murmured as he walked down the stairway.

Mrs. Kinney came to the side of the woman whose sobbing distressed her immeasurably. She had grown to experience sincere affection for this mysterious and lovely visitor.

"What is it, my poor dear?" she whispered.

"I did not know one's heart could break twice," Mademoiselle Dupin cried wildly.

For a long while the shrewd housekeeper had watched her visitor's increasing interest in Anthony Trent. Of her employer's attitude Mrs. Kinney was in no doubt whatever. She supposed there had been some dreadful quarrel which seemed tragic now but which would pass over as other storms end.

"It will be all right," she said, comforting her.

"Never, never in this life!" sobbed Mademoiselle Dupin.

Trent's destination was Washington and his mission to see a cabinet officer of wide influence who had formerly been ambassador to the Court of St. James. Anthony Trent had met him in London under circumstances so far out of the ordinary that he did not think he would have difficulty in recalling himself to Mr. Hill.

Cabinet officers are not easy of access. From his room at the New Willard Trent sought to speak to him over the telephone. This proved to be impossible. The cabinet officer was protected from telephonic assaults by a private secretary whose manners were too brusque to suit Anthony Trent.

The secretary after learning that Trent would not tell him why he desired to see Mr. Hill said it was idle to continue the conversation.

Half an hour later Trent came face to face with the secretary. He found him a big, overbearing youth who was holding his position during the recovery from an automobile accident of the real incumbent of the situation.

"I can't ask Mr. Hill to see you unless I know what it's about," he said bluntly.

"It is private business," Trent returned, "I cannot discuss it with you."

"Then you won't discuss it with the chief," said the other.

"I came from New York to see Mr. Hill and I'm going to see him. Also, I am not going to satisfy your curiosity."

"He's dated ahead for three days," Trent looked about him. He was in an ante-room with a big davenport and some comfortable chairs.

"I shall pass the time agreeably enough," he said. "I have slept on the hard ground, and that davenport is luxury."

"You can't sleep here," the secretary cried. "I shan't allow it."

"I'm afraid you take yourself too seriously," said Trent lighting a cigarette.

The secretary knew that in less than an hour Mr. Hill would pass through the ante-room. In that case the victory would go to Trent.

"We'll see you tomorrow afternoon," he said. "At four."

"We?" Trent retorted. "I'm afraid I must deny myself the pleasure of your presence until four tomorrow. I'll remain here until four tomorrow." He had a shrewd idea that Mr. Hill must pass along sooner or later.

"Give me your card," said the secretary scowling.

In two minutes he returned.

"Three-thirty tomorrow," he said crossly. "The chief will give you just two minutes."

"Try again," said Trent pleasantly.

"What do you mean?" the other asked.

"I vaulted over this two-foot barrier and looked through the crack of the door. I saw you sit down, light a cigarette, read a letter through twice and then come back. You didn't even go into Mr. Hill's room. Listen, I'm here to see Mr. Hill now. Go back there at once."

"I will not," said the other flushing.

He saw the danger signal in the intruder's eyes. The secretary was overbearing but he was not courageous. For a moment he thought Trent was about to leap the barrier.

"I'll give you twenty seconds," said Trent. "After that I shall surprise you."

"There's a man outside," said the secretary, speaking to the cabinet officer, fifteen seconds later, "who says you've got to see him. I don't like the looks of him at all. If I were you, sir, I'd have him thrown out."

"Only the President can say I've got to see him," said Hill frowning. "I'm much too busy today anyway. What was the name?"

"I didn't get it," the secretary lied. "Can't you read?" snapped Mr. Hill. He took the card from the other's fingers. "Anthony Trent! Is he waiting?"

"Yes, he wouldn't take a hint." The secretary was sullen.

Keys of Early Times Not Easy to Handle

The possessive and acquisitive instincts in man, which seem to develop early and to die hard even among the most advanced of nations, writes Louise Gordon Stables in the London Daily Telegraph, must have produced in quite primitive stages of human evolution some form of lock for the safeguarding of valuables, and capable of being negotiated only by its owner. In several passages in the Old Testament we come across references to such contrivances, as, for instance, in the Song of Solomon, where we read, "My hands dropped with myrrh and my fingers with sweet-smelling myrrh upon the handles of the lock." And that the key proper to the Oriental lock was of great size and considerable weight is borne out by the lines: "And the keys of the House of David will I lay upon my shoulder." For these keys, fashioned of wood and studded at one end with iron pegs to correspond with holes in the wooden lock, might, in the case of the door of the city or of a public building, measure a couple of feet in length and were correspondingly heavy, so that a bunch of them would be carried most easily slung at one's back, the cord threaded through holes in their other extremity, being held in front.

Arbor Day

Tree-planting festivals are probably as old as civilization. Sacred trees and groves, planted avenues and roadsides, shaded academic walks and memorial trees were common long before America was discovered. Arbor day, as such, however, is purely American in origin and grew out of conditions peculiar to the great plains of the West, a country practically treeless over much of its area, but supporting a flourishing agriculture and with a soil and climate well able to nourish tree growth. Arbor day originated and was first observed in Nebraska in 1872.

THE FROLIC

First old Witty Witch told stories as she sat by the bonfire, holding some of the little elves and brownies and gnomes in her lap.

She told them wondrous happenings which were taking place back in the flames of the bonfire. She told them what the sparks were saying, and when the great loud crackles came she told them what they meant.

After she had told stories for a long time, they asked Mr. Giant to tell them some.

So he stretched out his great, long legs, and after clearing his throat so that it resounded through the woods, Mr. Giant commenced and told them many of the dangerous escapes he had had, which they enjoyed hearing about—especially because Mr. Giant was safe and sound with them now.

Sometimes he would get them so excited, but after the story telling in front of the bonfire was over the dance began.

The elves danced with the fairies, and the brownies danced with the gnomes, and the woodland orchestra of the Fairy Ybab played wondrous music.

The trees hummed the tunes as they danced, and the wind sang, too. Oh, how beautifully the wind sang, although a bit sadly.

Even the little stars came out and danced.

And Mr. Moon peeped through the trees and grinned with pleasure to see every one enjoying the dance so much.

"Now," said Effie Elf, "it is time for the picnic."

The bonfire had been kept up all this time, and they had all sat around it once more, while they had delicious goodies which had been cooked in the fire.

There were roasted ears of corn and there were roasted apples. And they had the ice cream of Elfland with a delicious hot sauce poured over it which had been cooked in the bonfire.

After they had had the picnic, the elves said:

"Now, hunt for the nuts!" "What?" exclaimed Fairy Ybab. "Something more is to happen!"

"Certainly," said the elves. So they all started looking for nuts—and they found hidden nearby hickory nuts, chestnuts, butternuts.

"We will roast them in the fire, too," said the elves, "but first of all we must present the prize to Bennie Brownie for finding the greatest number of nuts."

"The prize is a handsome umbrella made out of a red toadstool."

Bennie Brownie made a low bow as he received his prize, and he held the umbrella over his head for the rest of the evening.

"I hope it rains tomorrow," he said. "Then I will take a long walk. How smart and fine I will look with this umbrella!"

"Well," said Bennie Brownie, smiling, "I have a great deal to do tomorrow."

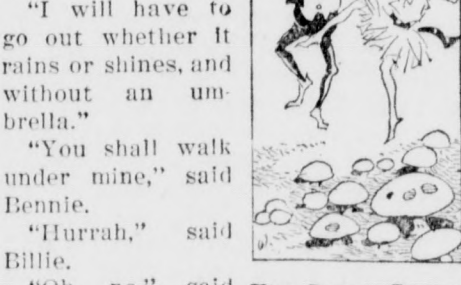

"I will have to go out whether it rains or shines, and without an umbrella."

"You shall walk under mine," said Bennie.

"Hurrah," said Bennie.

"Oh, no," said the Dance Began. The Elves, "for we have smaller umbrellas as prizes for every one—prizes because we like you all so much."

And then with singing and dancing and jumping, and laughing, the party and frolic came to an end.

The Dance Began.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is limited, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

Museum's Good Purpose

An unusual feature of the Dresden Hygiene museum of 1930, which will move into its own home in a specially constructed building in 1929, will be the exhibit showing human beings and their existing conditions of life with measures by which the injurious effects of these conditions may be counteracted. In 1930 the museum will be the center of a great exhibition which will be devoted to the advance of hygiene since 1911, when the German Hygiene museum originated.

MOTOR CLUB TRAFFIC LESSONS REACH FIVE MILLION CHILDREN

Traffic safety lessons are now reaching more than five million school children in the United States through the American Automobile Association and affiliated motor clubs of this nation-wide organization. With 23,127,102 children enrolled in schools from kindergarten to the ninth grade, this means that more than one-fifth of all pupils are receiving classroom safety instruction.

The California State Automobile Association, largest of the 1,075 affiliated A. A. A. clubs, has extended its activities in this respect during the past year to one hundred per cent coverage of the public schools of Northern and Central California.

At its own expense the motorists' organization is conducting a program of visual education in every school classroom, distributing monthly 12-100 colored posters. Each month's poster visualizes a graphic lesson in traffic safety for the pupils. The posters depict the major traffic hazards encountered by boys and girls in their use of streets and highways and remain on classroom walls throughout the month.

Teachers are furnished the text of a suggested talk with each poster on the subject for the month and this is the basis of lessons and compositions by the pupils.

The posters and lessons are prepared and distributed by the public safety department of the State Automobile Association which has been the recipient of many letters from school and police authorities expressing appreciation and urging continuance and extension of the work. This safety activity is now being extended to include parochial and other private schools.

The Automobile Association also conducts the activities of the public school traffic reserves in the schools of principal cities. During the past year, in co-operation with the association, the State Division of Motor Vehicles has extended this safety work to rural schools on main traveled highways. There are now more than 5,000 school boys in Northern and Central California schools who wear the familiar yellow metal arm insignia which is supplied by the Association to designate them as junior traffic officers.

INCREASE IN THE USE OF AUTO IS SHOWN

Dreary predictions of pessimists that automobile registrations in California were reaching the "saturation point" were set at naught by a statement issued Monday by the division of motor vehicles showing a gain of 63,399 in fee paid registration for the first nine months of this year over 1927.

The total for the nine months period is 1,800,552 as compared with 1,736,795 for 1927.

The records of the division show a total of 38,000,552 was collected from the motorists during this period. The bulk of this will go to the state highway commission and the various counties for maintenance and repair of roads.

The registration for the nine-month period is divided as follows: Passenger cars, 1,542,848; pneumatic trucks, 176,216; solid trucks, 35,941; motorcycles, 9,130; trailers, 36,059.

The division anticipates that at least 25,000 more cars will be added to the total gain between now and January 1.

The heaviest gain for the period was in the registration of pleasure cars, the total collected from this source being $5,452,535. The fact that many cars changed hands during the period is indicated by receipts totaling $510,398 for transfers.

The neglectful motorist contributed their bit also, for the division collected $56,178 during the period from persons who had lost their operator licenses and applied for new ones, paying the legal fee of 50 cents for a duplicate.

Chauffeurs contributed $254,722 to the total receipts at the legal rate of $2 each for licenses.

The division will accept applications by mail for the new 1929 license plates any time after December 1.

Motorists are urged to use this method of obtaining the plates rather than make long trips to division offices and stand in line. Division officials declare better service can be given "mail order" patrons if the simple regulations are observed.

Applications by mail are accepted if the certificate of registration is forwarded with the amount of the fee remitted by certified check, money order or bank draft. Applicants should avoid sending currency. If there has been a change of address since last year it should be written in carefully on the face of the certificate of registration.

Counters will be open at all of the offices of the division on December 15 for the public distribution of plates.

NO SUCH THING AS SHY OR EXCITABLE PEOPLE

There is probably no such thing as a person who is "excitable," "shy," "phlegmatic," or "hot tempered" at all times and under all conditions. Those people who seem excitable may prove to be more cool than others in a crisis. The quiet type may prove to be emotionally unbalanced under certain specific conditions.

These facts have been given support by an experiment on the emotional makeup of human beings recently completed by Dr. David Wechsler, research psychologist of New York, and Dr. Harold Ellis Jones.

One practical result of this discovery will be to encourage specific rather than general methods of treatment for people who are "emotionally sick." A person who is considered to be "emotionally unbalanced" may actually be unbalanced in a very limited field of his emotional life, and the curative measures must be focused on that field specifically rather than on the emotions generally.

Dr. Jones explains the method used in the experiment as follows: "Variations in the emotional state of a person involve changes in the electrical conductivity of his skin. By measuring these changes in conductivity with a very delicate instrument, the O'Arsonval galvanometer, it is possible to estimate the degree of change in emotional disturbance which an individual is undergoing at any certain time.

"In the experiment conducted by Dr. Wechsler and myself, thirty-five adults were tested with the galvanometer while they were exposed to a series of forty stimuli tending to arouse emotional changes. The subjects were required to perform a brief mental test, were shown a series of stereotypical pictures, and were mildly startled or frightened by automobile horns, electrical buzzing noises, etc. At the end of the series, the experimenter announced, 'Now I am going to give you an electric shock. At first it will be mild, but later it will be very severe. When you begin to feel the current say "feel," and when you can't stand it any longer say "stop." The current was actually of a low intensity, but marked emotional responses were obtained.

"The emotional responses were classified according to the kinds of stimuli which aroused them, that is, shock, fear, mental effort, embarrassment, irritation, etc. The degree of change by each person to each class of stimuli was recorded. It was found that the emotional response of an individual to one class of stimuli, fear for example, showed little agreement with emotional response to another class of stimuli, say shock. In other words "emotionality" is apparently not a unit trait, but consists of a large number of special tendencies, which reveal different responses under different conditions."

ROOSEVELT HAD FIRST CONVENTION 'HOOK-UP'

In 1908—President Roosevelt was an actual listener to the wild demonstrations which greeted his name when he was nominated for the presidency. Hanging ten feet above the heads of the delegates were four black disks which contained a combination of telephone and phonograph and, with the aid of this device, the president, in the White House, holding the receiver close to his ear, was able to catch the words of Henry Cabot Lodge's nomination speech.

In 1928—the entire nation, through the advance made in the art of radio and the nationwide hookup by telephone wires, was able to hear the events as they took place in the convention halls at Kansas City and at Houston.

CHRYSLER Plymouth

AMERICA ACCEPTS AND ACCLAIMS THE NEW PLYMOUTH

The sales record of the new Plymouth, established in two weeks' time, is without parallel or precedent for a car in this field—not in a few retail centers but all over the whole country.

Hundreds of thousands have compared the new Plymouth with the three or four other cars catering to the same great market.

They see contrast in size, style, performance and safety so sharply in favor of Plymouth that curiosity bursts into enthusiasm, enthusiasm is transformed into sales.

You, too, owe it to yourself to see it, ride in it, drive it. All doubt as to the highest dollar-for-dollar value in the lowest-priced field ends right there.

Roadster (with rumble seat), $675; Coupe, $685; Touring, $695; 2-Door Sedan, $700; DeLuxe Coupe (with rumble seat), $735; 4-Door Sedan, $735.

Miss: But, officer, I'm left-handed."

Tat: "It's all right if you really want the affairs public."

"Boss, I want a raise. Just been married."

"Sorry, but we are not responsible for accidents that happen to our men outside the plant."

Let us figure with you on that new house you are going to build.
